Seeking: I like the girl-next-door type. She can take a goofy picture but also a normal pretty one with a smile and knows the right moment for both. A really good knowledge of pop culture is important because it's my life ... so she's gotta keep up on the funny movie quotes. Come to think of it, I'm pretty sarcastic all the time so keeping up in general is required.

I am passionate about: Entertainment ... knowing "why" about things in life ... my steak ... oh, and Betty White.

The most embarrassing thing I'm willing to admit here: For a year out

U.S. Postal Service seeks to slash costs by ending its Saturday delivery

The post office is renewing its drive to drop Saturday delivery—and plans a rate increase—in an effort to fend off a projected $7 billion loss this year.

Without drastic action the agency could face a cumulative loss of $238 billion over 10 years, Postmaster General John Potter said in releasing a series of consultant reports on agency operations and its outlook.

“The projections going forward are not bright,” Potter told reporters in a briefing. But, he added, “all is not lost ... we can right this ship.”

Sen. Tom Carper (D-Del.), chairman of the Senate subcommittee with oversight authority over the Postal Service, called on Congress to give the post office the flexibility to deal with its future needs.

Question and answer session

The Postal Service unveiled a 10-year plan Tuesday for coping with its financially strapped future. Some questions and answers:

How did the post office get in this fix?

Americans have been rapidly switching from the mail to the Internet for communications. The post office tried to refocus more on business mail and advertising, but the recession caused that to be cut also, and studies show little chance of mail volume getting back to former levels.

How bad is it?

The agency faces a possible loss of $7 billion this year and total losses of $238 billion over a decade if nothing is done.

Don't they get a subsidy for operations from the taxpayers?

No, that ended decades ago, and Congress is unlikely to restore it in the current financial situation.

Why is the post office so eager to eliminate Saturday delivery?

It's one of the most effective ways for it to save money. Right now it takes six mail carriers to cover five delivery routes—one per route to deliver five days, and one to work each route one day. Cut out that sixth day and you need only five carriers to serve five routes.

Why make the changes now instead of putting them off?

The post office will have 300,000 people eligible to retire in next 10 years. Six-day delivery would mean hiring new carriers. Then, if there are future cut-backs, those workers might have to be laid off. The postal service wants to avoid that.

Will post offices close on Saturday?

No, people still will be able to go there to mail items and check their post office boxes.

Will my local post office be closed?

Congress limits the closing of post offices. There is a proposal to open postal counters in places such as convenience stores, supermarkets and office supply stores. If that works, then some local post offices could be closed.

ONE LAST THING ...

As RedEye noted in 2003, The Postal Service—the music group—began as a long-distance collaboration fostered via the mail. Jimmy Tamborello of Dntel would write synth-pop compositions and then send them to Death Cab for Cutie's Ben Gibbard, who would devise vocal melodies and overdubs.

Labels just make you sound stupid

I don't mind cussing that much. I do think sometimes people overuse curse words in their everyday vernacular to the point where every other word is the F-bomb, which can make them seem less intelligent. (Trust me, your story about your trip to the Whole Foods shouldn't involve that much vulgarity; Jewel maybe, but not Whole Foods).

What I do mind is when people corrupt descriptors to mean something offensive. I am talking about "gay," "retarded" and "ladies." The first two you are probably aware of, but the third might slide under your radar.

Referring to something as "gay" or "retarded" to actually mean "stupid"—or, more accurately, "something that is beneath me"—has been in the lexicon for quite some time. Just last week I overheard a college kid on the bus say to his friend, "I hate that class; it's so gay." Unless he was talking about an Intro to Homosexuality class and the homework assignment was to make out with another dude, then I doubt the class was actually so gay.

His friend replied, "Yeah, and the professor is so retarded!" Again, not sure that's the correct way to describe the professor as I doubt he actually is someone with special needs. No, what they meant is that the class is dumb (i.e. too difficult for them intellectually) and the professor is a jerk (i.e. he won't take their crap).

These misappropriated terms need to be retired, but they are popping up everywhere. Recently, White House Chief of Staff Rahm Emanuel referred to liberals in a closed-door meeting as "retarded." Attention-whore Sarah Palin was outraged and called for the Democrat's resignation over the slur. Days later, Rush Limbaugh used the same term three times on his radio show, but Palin shrugged, saying Rush was making a joke. Regardless, the term shouldn't be used as a slur. Neither should the word "gay" to mean anything other than a homosexual—and even then be careful of your tone if you aren't one—or to mean "happy" if you are a character in a Jane Austen book.

Celebrities are using these slurs as well. Madonna called her ex-husband "retarded" after their divorce, and Kristen Stewart referred to rumors of her relationship with that pale-faced vampire kid as "retarded."

The word "ladies" often is used as a negative as well. I have noticed with increasing frequency that certain types of men like to enter a room, a meeting, a huddle or any other area full of other men and say, "Hello, ladies!" or "Let's go, ladies!" They seem to be trying to exert subconscious power over these other men by demeaning them and calling them lesser humans, which apparently is how they see women. How many times have you seen a movie where the coach is disappointed in his team and calls them "ladies" or "girls"? Try pulling that crap with the Canadian women's hockey team and see how far you get.

Just because they aren't the N-word or that well-known gay slur that starts with an F doesn't mean they aren't hurtful, so why should they get a pass? Try thinking before you speak.

Community mourns girl slain in crash

Chicago Tribune

Gathering for Jada Washington's funeral at a South Side church just two blocks from where she was hit and killed by a vehicle last month, her family remembered the 6-year-old girl as smart, energetic and fiercely loyal to her brother and sister.

"She was a wonderful little girl who was taken too soon," said Vera Williams-Willis, the principal at Altgeld Elementary School, where Jada was a first-grader.

As music filled the auditorium Tuesday at Freedom Temple Church in Englewood, Jada's parents stooped beside her casket where she lay in a long white dress and tiara. A favorite pink-and-white stuffed rabbit rested beside her shoulder.

"She was my little helper," said Lauren McCue, Jada's teacher. "She would always hand out papers and pencils."

McCue said Jada, an "A" student, also had started helping a struggling classmate.

"She would always make sure this other little girl was on task and would calm her down," McCue said as she wiped away tears. "She really would have been something."

Jada and her aunt, Tiuette Richardson, 21, were walking to a corner store Feb. 16 to buy candy when a car struck them as they crossed Ashland Avenue near West 74th Street. Richardson, who underwent several surgeries for a fractured skull, leg and shoulder blade, sat in a wheelchair in the church's front row Tuesday with tears streaming down her face as friends and family members read Bible passages and sang.

The vehicle that struck Jada and Richardson was driven by Eddie Lumpkin, who was charged with reckless homicide and aggravated DUI, had cocaine in his system and admitted to smoking marijuana and buying beer before the crash, prosecutors have said. A Tribune story also disclosed that Lumpkin had been issued at least 40 traffic tickets in his life, yet still had a valid driver's license.

U.S. SUPREME COURT JUSTICES SIGNAL DISSATISFACTION WITH CHICAGO HANDGUN BAN, MAY MOVE TO OVERTURN

Tribune Washington Bureau

Most of the Supreme Court justices who two years ago said the Second Amendment protects individual gun rights signaled during arguments Tuesday they are ready to extend this right nationwide and to use it to strike down some state and local gun regulations.

Since 1982, Chicago has outlawed handguns in the city, even for law-abiding residents who sought to keep one at home. That ordinance was challenged by several city residents who said it violated their rights "to keep and bear arms" under the Second Amendment.

The case forced the high court to confront a simple question it had never answered: Did the Second Amendment limit only the federal government's ability to regulate guns and state militias, or did it also give citizens a right to challenge state and local restrictions on guns?

All signs Tuesday were that five justices saw the right to "bear arms" as national in scope and not limited to laws passed in Washington.

Justice Anthony M. Kennedy described the individual right to a gun as being of "fundamental character," like the right to freedom of speech. "If it is not fundamental, then Heller is wrong," Kennedy said, referring to the decision two years ago that struck down the handgun ban in the District of Columbia. Kennedy was part of the 5-4 majority in that case.

POTENTIAL EFFECTS?

A ruling striking down the Chicago handgun ban would reverberate nationwide because it would open the courthouse door to constitutional challenges to all manner of local or state gun regulations. However, the justices may not give much guidance on how far this right extends.

Chief Justice John G. Roberts Jr. called it an "extremely important" right in the Constitution. Justices Antonin Scalia and Samuel A. Alito Jr. echoed the theme that the court had endorsed an individual, nationwide right in their decision two years ago. The fifth member of the majority, Justice Clarence Thomas, did not comment during the argument, but he had been a steady advocate of the Second Amendment.

Chief Justice Roberts all but forecast the court would issue an opinion that avoids deciding the harder questions about whether guns can be carried in public as well as kept at home. "We haven't said anything about the content of the Second Amendment," Roberts said at one point. He added that the justices need not rule on whether there is a right to carry a "concealed" weapon.

It will be several months before the court hands down a decision in the case of McDonald v. Chicago.

Couple, son found slain in home

A husband, wife and their son were found shot to death in their Darien home early Tuesday morning after the couple's daughter called police while hiding in a closet, officials of the western suburb said.

Police arrived at the house in the 8900 block of Kilkenny Drive shortly after 3 a.m. and discovered the bodies of Jeffrey Kramer, 50, his wife Lori Kramer, 48, and their son Michael, 20, according to Police Chief Robert Pavelchik.

Jeffrey and Michael were found on the first floor and Lori was on a stairway leading up to the second floor, Pavelchik said.

Police found three other people in the home: the couple's daughter Angela, 25, who had called 911; the couple's eldest son, Anthony, 29, who was climbing out a basement window when officers arrived; and a 17-year-old girlfriend of Michael whom police would not identify.

They said the girlfriend was the one neighbors reported pounding on their doors after the shootings.

The eldest son apparently had his bedroom in the basement, Pavelchik said, explaining why he was crawling out of the window.

Police say the three survivors did not witness the shootings.

"There's nobody that can identify the person or persons in the house that did the shooting," said John Cooper, deputy police chief. "They heard the shots but didn't see anybody."

Cooper said authorities still have no suspect or motive and have not recovered a weapon.

Abe Lincoln, vampire slayer?

Apparently when Abraham Lincoln wasn't splitting rails he was cracking heads.

Honest Abe already ranks among our country's greatest presidents, but a new book uncovers the truth about how Lincoln filled all those leisure hours when he wasn't saving the union, abolishing slavery and setting a new course for the nation's future—"Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter."

The book, released this month by Grand Central Publishing, weaves historical accounts of Lincoln's life with fantasy tales of the undead. It's the latest in a series of popular mash-ups of classical literature and horror fiction, including "Pride and Prejudice and Zombies," "Sense and Sensibility and Sea Monsters" and the "Adventures of Huckleberry Finn and Zombie Jim."

Seth Grahame-Smith, the author of this fictitious Lincoln biography and the aforementioned best-selling "Pride and Prejudice" rewrite, will be part of a free book signing at 7 p.m. Saturday at The Abraham Lincoln Presidential Museum in Springfield. The event will be webcast at presidentlincoln.org.

"Lincoln was a big fan of classic literature and a fan of humor," said David Blanchette, the museum's spokesman. "He was a self-taught man, a well-read man, and we think he would have enjoyed this type of thing."

Crowd laughs as Blago talks ethics

Rod Blagojevich paints himself as a victim, but a capacity crowd of 1,000 people at Northwestern University saw him more as a political clown Tuesday night.

They laughed during the introductions, when a campus leader said the College Democrats invited the indicted former Illinois governor to speak to "make sure tomorrow's leaders respect the rule of law."

They laughed when someone insisted that tapping Blagojevich to lead an ethics discussion was akin to asking Tiger Woods to lecture on fidelity.

And they laughed when he compared himself to Thomas Jefferson, Elvis and a mythical Greek figure.

The audience response appeared to ruffle Blagojevich, who returned to his alma mater to give a speech on "ethics in government." He raised his voice, bemoaned the local media and vehemently denied any wrongdoing.

"Why don't you at least give me the benefit of the doubt and let me prove myself in a court of law?" he asked.

In the 13 months since his arrest on corruption charges, the seemingly omnipresent Blagojevich has protested his innocence in myriad forums and insisted he would be cleared once the wiretaps that led to his arrest were heard. He stuck to those talking points during an appearance on the Evanston campus for which he was paid an undisclosed amount.

Blagojevich denied his jester-for-hire persona was part of his media strategy. Instead, he said, it's the only way to pay his mortgage and send his two daughters to private school.

"It's just a horrible, horrible thing," he said. "But this is a life lesson for our children."

Memo: Sophomore sports halted at CPS

Budgetary conditions have prompted Chicago Public Schools to halt all spring sophomore sports, according to a memo obtained by the Tribune.

District sports director Calvin Davis sent the memo to school athletic directors Tuesday saying that only varsity and freshman teams will be allowed to practice for now. The memo, which some coaches called confusing, comes at the last possible moment for sophomore coaches. Schools chief Ron Huberman has stated publicly that many programs will be cut and teachers will have to come to the table to negotiate their annual raises.

Body pulled from Lake Michigan near Uptown

The body of a person was found in Lake Michigan in the Uptown neighborhood Tuesday afternoon, Chicago Fire Department officials said.

Officials did not know the gender or age of the person who was found, said Quention Curtis, a fire department spokesman. Curtis said that firefighters were called to the 4700 block of the North Lake Shore Drive about 5 p.m. and located the body a short time later. Chicago police officials did not have any immediate information available.

Cops: Stabbed couple likely killed each other

A South Side husband and wife found stabbed to death in their apartment Monday afternoon probably killed each other or perhaps was a case of murder-suicide, police said Tuesday. Mario Zavala, 46, and his wife, Krystal, 22, had a "volatile relationship" and had recently gotten back together, said Officer Laura Kubiak, a department spokeswoman. Police do not believe a third person was responsible for their deaths but will wait for the results of an autopsy to make a final determination, she said. Police are treating the case not as a murder but as a death investigation, she added.

Political strategist Karl Rove says President George W. The book is due out Tuesday.

U.S. vulnerable to megaquake

7 Just 50 miles off the Pacific Northwest coast is an earthquake hot spot that threatens to unleash on Seattle, Portland and Vancouver the kind of damage that has shattered Chile.

The fault has been dormant for more than 300 years, but when it awakens—tomorrow or decades from now—the consequences could be devastating.

Recent computer simulations of a hypothetical magnitude-9 quake found that shaking could last 2 to 5 minutes—strong enough to potentially cause poorly constructed buildings from British Columbia to Northern California to collapse and severely damage

AID FOR CHILE

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton handed over 25 satellite phones to Chile in the country's capital of Santiago on Tuesday while promising more. She said there has been no discussion of sending U.S. troops to help distribute aid or keep order, as was done in Haiti following the far more deadly earthquake on the island in January.

highways and bridges.

Such a quake also would send powerful tsunami waves rushing to shore in minutes. While big cities such as Portland and Seattle would be protected from severe flooding, low-lying seaside communities may not be as lucky.

The Pacific Northwest "has a long geological history of doing exactly what happened in Chile," said Brian Atwater, a geologist with the U.S. Geological Survey and University of Washington. "It's not a matter of if but when the next one will happen."

There's an 80 percent chance the southern end of the fault off southern Oregon and Northern California would break in the next 50 years and produce a megaquake, said Chris Goldfinger, who heads the Active Tectonics and Seafloor Mapping Laboratory at Oregon State University.

World's laziest dog owner fined for country drive

8 LONDON An English dog owner has been fined about $100 after taking his pet for a stroll while driving next to him in his car.

Prosecutors said Paul Railton was spotted driving at a low speed along a country lane in December, holding his dog's leash through the car window as the animal trotted alongside.

Railton pleaded guilty Monday to not being in proper control of a vehicle. His lawyer, Paul Donoghue, said the 23-year-old Railton acknowledged "it was a silly thing to do and there was an element of laziness" while exercising his lurcher, a type of crossbred sighthound.

FAUX HAWKS?

Team's success has vaulted hockey to Cubs-like popularity in Chicago

By Ryan Smith
FOR REDEYE

Aaron Robison is reluctant to admit it, but he's the kind of Blackhawks fan who's been spotted ever more frequently at the United Center—young, enthusiastic and barely aware of the team's long-suffering days. Just don't call the 27-year-old accountant the dreaded "B-word."

"I feel very self-accused about being a bandwagon fan," said Robison, of Lakeview. "It feels like I lack because I just started watching when the Hawks were getting more popular, so I think I have that held against me."

Bandwagon guilt is a common theme among Blackhawks nation these days. A couple of seasons ago, the Hawks were the dimmest star in Chicago's sports constellation, and their fan base had seemingly dwindled to a small group of die-hards.

Veteran Hawks winger Adam Burish remembers that time well.

"My first couple years here, there'd be 5,000 people here for home games," he said. "It was so dead and miserable, we'd joke and say that it was Dress Like a Seat night out there."

But the organization has used a well-timed combination of bright young talent, increased TV exposure and—most importantly—on-ice success to revive the brand. Suddenly the United Center is consistently filled with so many new hockey enthusiasts that some have nicknamed the stadium "Winter Wrigley."

"Definitely from what I've seen, the United Center has turned into Wrigley Field a little bit here, and there's a kind of a party atmosphere," said David Eckland, 26, of Tinley Park, an admitted "bandwagon hopper."

For Matt Lowman, the Blackhawks experience is even better than Wrigley.

Lowman, 24, was one of the 22,161 people at a sold-out Hawks game Feb. 5 and counted himself a Chicago sports agnostic when he moved to Lincoln Park from Columbus, Ohio, in August 2008. One might assume the Ohio State University alumnus with little hockey knowledge quickly would convert to the Bears or Bulls. Guess again.

"I like the Blackhawks more than any other Chicago team," Lowman said. "I liked watching them, and honestly, there's been more of a buzz around the Blackhawks in Lincoln Park than about the Cubs, Sox or Bears over the last year."

And though she is a Chicago native, Vivian Beltran, 28, of Lakeview, claimed to be a fan of only the Cubs and Bears until six months ago, when Robison, her boyfriend, introduced her to hockey.

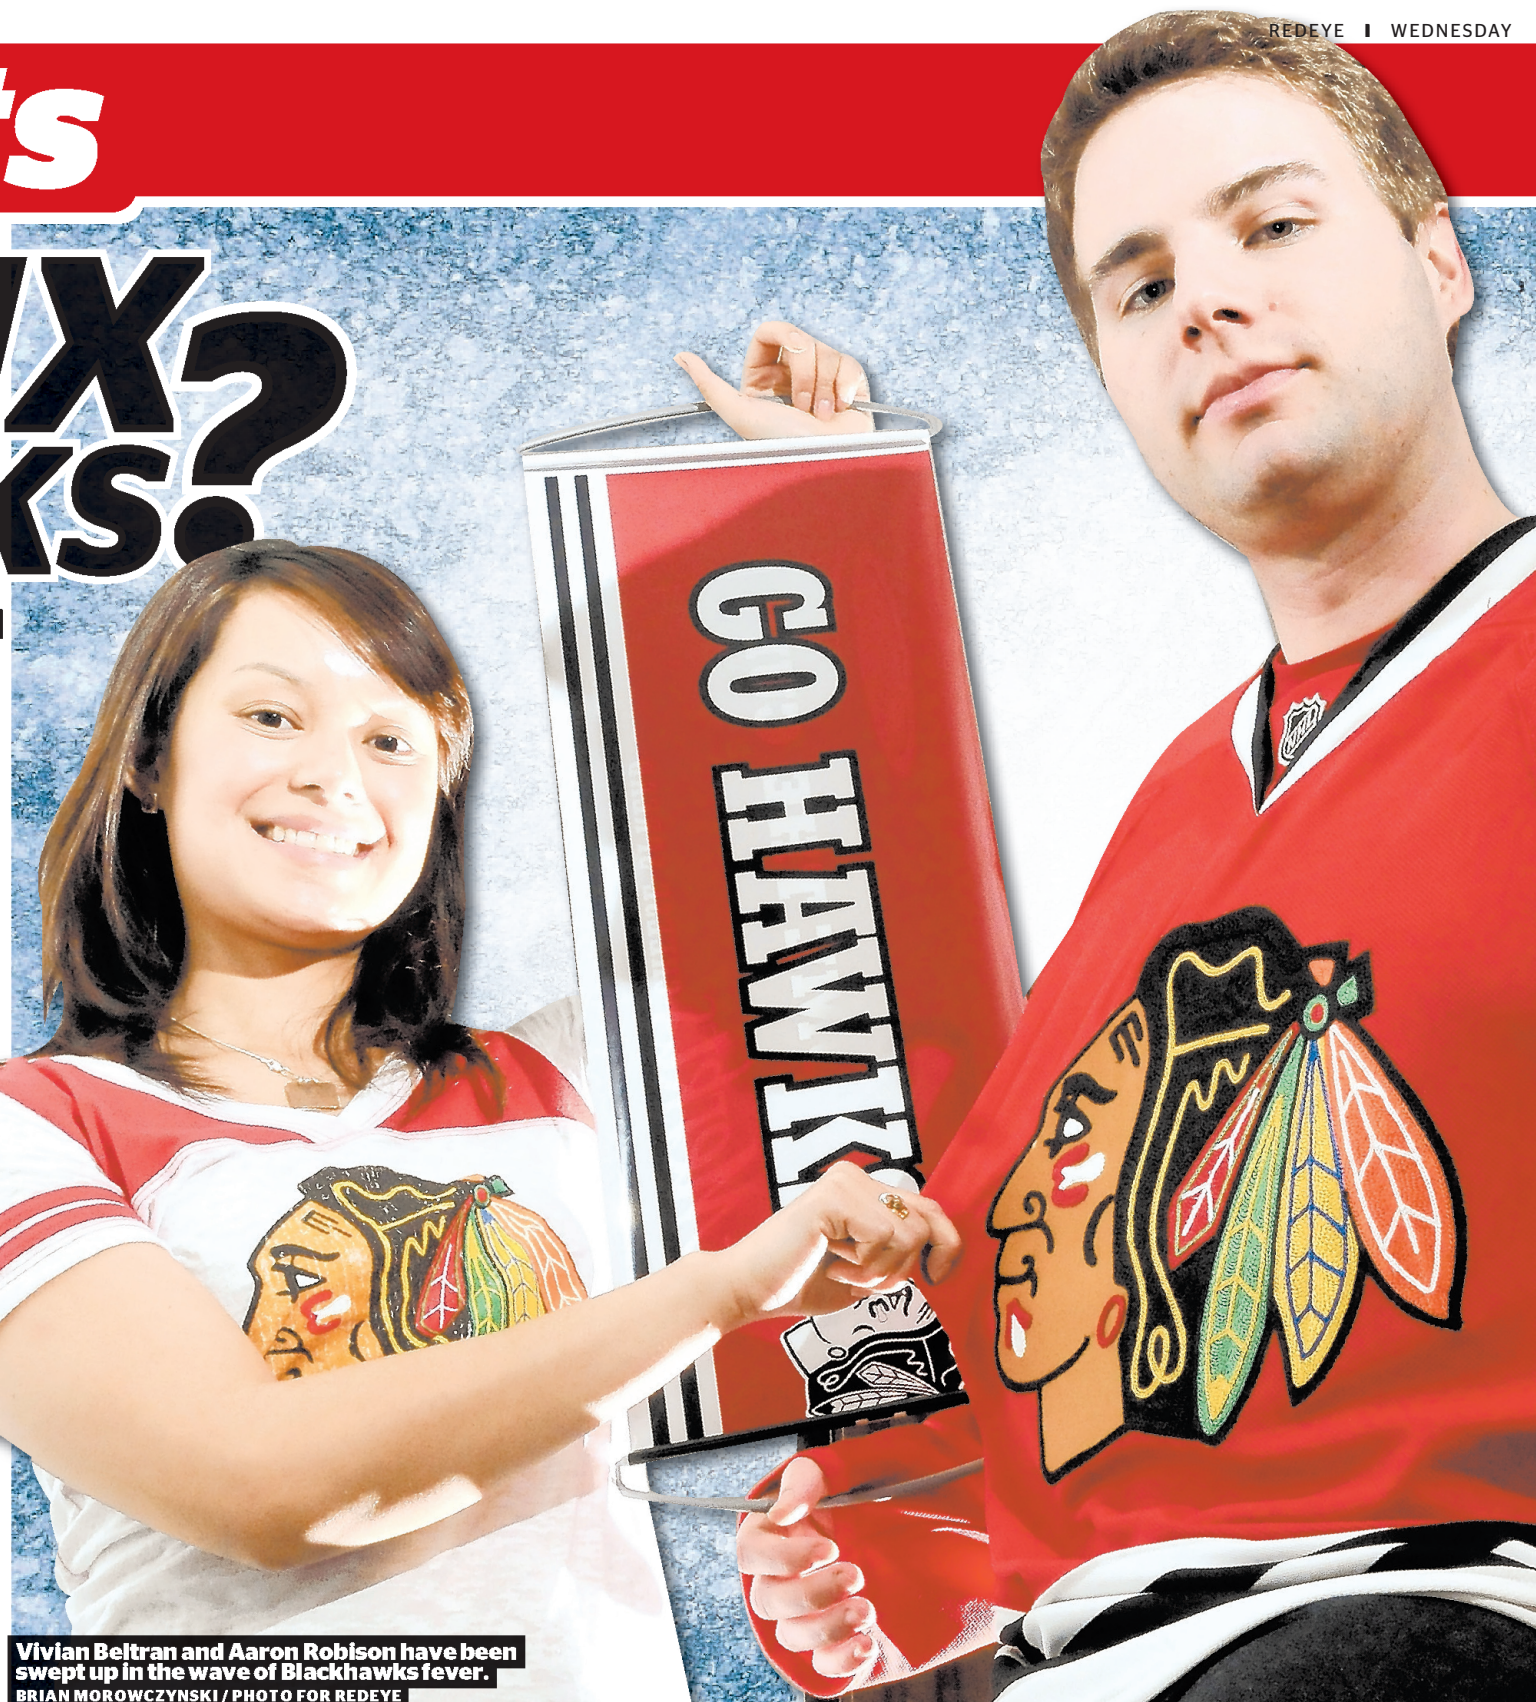

"I wasn't really interested in it before, but I watched a few games with [Robison] and I grew to love it," she said. "It's a new thing for me, and it's very exciting."

The excitement surrounding the Blackhawks is palpable to the team's tenured players—many of whom recall the Hawks' lean years.

"It used to be quiet here for games, you expected to get a boost from fans at home, but it just wasn't there," Hawks defenseman Brent Seabrook said. "Now these fans are awesome and crazy and it's been a lot of fun being in front of a packed house. It's given us a boost going Vivian Beltran and Aaron Robison have been swept up in the wave of Blackhawks fever.

ARE YOU A BANDWAGON FAN?

How do you separate the real hard-core fans from the ones just taking a brief break from baseball or the Bears? We devised a simple quiz to help you figure out what kind of Blackhawks fan you are.

1. What is a hat trick?

- a. The term for the rare feat of a player scoring three goals in a single game.
- b. When a player blocks a flying puck in midair with his helmet.
- c. A crazy goal celebration where a player performs a head spin on the ice.

3. Jonathan Toews' last name is pronounced like ...

- a. Toes
- b. Tayves
- c. Um, I have no clue.

2. The tradition of the national anthem at Blackhawks home games consists of ...

- a. Players placing their hand on the face of the team logo during the song.
- b. Fans cheering and applauding throughout the whole song, not just during the last couple of lines.
- c. The public address system blaring a recorded version of the anthem performed by R. Kelly.

4. In the offseason, the Hawks signed Marian Hossa for a contract worth ...

- a. $31 million over five years
- b. $62.8 million over 12 years
- c. Partial ownership of the team and the exclusive rights to the "Hoss" nickname.

Hossa

5. When the Red Wings come to town, the home crowd is fond of chanting the phrase ...

a. "Detroit sucks!"

b. "Clip those wings!"

c. "Bailout! Bailout!"

into games."

But not everyone is thrilled with the idea of thousands of newbie Hawks fans flooding the stands. Some of the devout old-school fans who have stuck with the team through thin and thin are a bit wary.

"Five to 10 years ago, nobody gave a [poop]," said Craig Bergman, 31, of Lake in the Hills, who said he's been a hard-core fan for 20 years. "It sucks now that there's so many people because I can't afford a ticket these days. You got a better team, but you can't afford a ticket."

David Campbell, 34, of Wicker Park, lamented the sudden number of "W" flags imported from Wrigley and a lack of hockey knowledge and etiquette.

"The thing I hate the worst is the 'SHOOT!' scream from bandwagon fans whenever any Blackhawks player touches the puck," Campbell said.

Robison and Beltran have seen some of the resentment from longtime fans firsthand. A season-ticket holder yelled at them at a recent Hawks game for standing in front of him during the play.

"He was like, 'Excuse me, you need to sit down until a play is over with,'" Beltran said. "At Wrigley, you're used to people being so drunk at the game that they don't pay as much attention."

Burish said he doesn't care for all the negative talk about bandwagon fans.

"I hear people say that bandwagon fans are taking all the season tickets. Big deal. If you want to come and support the team, I don't care how long you've been here," Burish said. "My thought is that if you want to come out and cheer, I could care less if you've been here for 10 years or 10 minutes."

Hello again

The Blackhawks are back, and you know what that means, right? No, really, do you? We'd like to know. redeyechicago.com/fiveonfive

TOPIC	TRACY SWARTZ tswartz@tribune.com	SCOTT BOLOHAN twitter.com/scottbolohan	DR. FANTASY redeyesports@tribune.com	JEN PATTERSON csnchicago.com/pages/blog_patterson	STANLEY'S CUP redeyesports@tribune.com
1 How will Blackhawks fans welcome the team back to home ice Wednesday?	With sloppy kisses. Seconds are saved for Kane.	With a newfound slight understanding of hockey.	Excitedly. Hawks fans care more right now about a certain Cup than a few medals.	They'll cry when they have to hear "O' Canada!" again.	With full beers. One in each hand.
2 What could Jonathan Toews, Duncan Keith, Brent Seabrook and Patrick Kane do with their medals?	They could pawn them. Scott Lee Cohen is used to people giving him the business.	Have an awesome game of pogs.	Wear them for a 10 percent off coupon valid at the next Olympics.	Not much. The gold medal is only worth about $494, and the silver is worth about $260.	Save them for the coming apocalypse when the Blackhawks win the title.
3 What do you think the Bulls should do with Joakim Noah and his foot?	Donate it to the museum ... at my house.	Cut his hair.	Considering he's on my fantasy team, make him suck it up and get me some boards!	The opposite of what they do with Luol Deng.	Put it on ice. I like it that way.
4 How would you suggest Gordon Beckham get accustomed to playing second base?	In the mirror or the produce aisle. Scott could tell him what the kids do these days.	He could hang around Tracy and before long he'd be accustomed with second base.	I wouldn't know. I, um, never get to second base.	Just ask @OzzieGullen.	First, wear a cup.
5 NASCAR is taking the wings off its cars. What do you think of that?	Did Red Bull pull out as a sponsor? That's probably because Ricky Bobby is such a Tiger.	About time. Maybe next they can take the mullets off its crowd.	The ability for stock cars to fly does sound like it could create a competitive disadvantage.	Attach them to Danica Patrick's back so she can fly far, far away.	I'll take them. That way I could be a "to-go cup."

What ‘the Fook’?

MESA, Ariz. The final day of practice at Fitch Park was dominated by one big question:
Why has Lou Piniella suddenly begun referring to Kosuke Fukudome as “the Fook” in Fukudome’s third season with the Cubs?
A Japanese reporter wanted to know where the nickname came from, and Piniella had a simple reply:
“I like the name,” he said.
Why’s that? “It’s easy to say,” he said.

Sounds like another Cubs-ready T-shirt.
“Why not?” Piniella replied.
Piniella told the reporter that if Fukudome didn’t like his new nickname, he should tell him. Fukudome’s interpreter, Hiro Aoyama, confirmed that Fukudome is OK with the name.
“Trademark,” Aoyama joked.
Of course, if “the Fook” doesn’t start hitting more than .250, it’s doubtful the T-shirts will be a hot item.

NAME THAT CUB If Lou Piniella can nickname Kosuke Fukudome “the Fook,” RedEye can give some other Cubs new nicknames. How about these?

Jeff “The Dictionary” Samardzija: Self-explanatory.

Micah “The Hoff” Hoffpauir: Suck it, Hasselhoff.

Ted “Eli” Lilly: He’s the perfect medicine for a losing streak.

Tom Gorzelanny: Tom.

GUILLÉN’S PREDICTION
Ozzie Guillen made a bold prediction about Gavin Floyd, who won a career-high 17 games in 2008. “I want Gavin Floyd to win 20 games,” Guillen said after Floyd threw two scoreless innings Tuesday in a B game against the L.A. Dodgers. “Why? Because I think he has the potential to do it.”

N.Y. ISLANDERS 5, BLACKHAWKS 3
Blake Comeau had a hat trick to lift the New York Islanders to a 5-3 victory over the Blackhawks on Tuesday. Patrick Kane (left) scored and had an assist for the Hawks, whose other goals were scored by Brian Campbell and Dustin Byfuglien.

These winter bar openings are heating up the nightlife scene

By Lisa Arnett

From a dress-to-impress lounge in River North to a new location of Harry Caray's Tavern, there are plenty of new hangouts to keep your glass full until spring comes along.

Harry Caray's Tavern

Navy Pier, 700 E. Grand Ave. 312-527-9700
Thanks to the touristy location of this sports shrine, just opened Monday, it probably isn't going to become your new favorite bar. But if you find yourself thirsty on Navy Pier for reasons we won't ask you to justify, it's one of the better places to park yourself, especially when the 140-seat patio opens. Good news for Jeremy Piven stalkers tiring of Rockit and Hub 51: He's one of many celeb investors here (Ryne Sandberg, Ernie Banks, Richard Dent and others) with a cocktail inspired by him on the menu. (Ari's Gold is a vanilla-citrus lemonade, in case you were wondering.)

Primebar

155 N. Wacker Drive 312-884-0000
Loop cubicle dwellers, ready for a fresh after-work hangout? Picture yourself here noshing on chimichurri steak pizza and sriracha-spiced shrimp sliders. Primebar does have a sleek, somewhat corporate feel similar to Midtown and One North, both within a four-block radius and also operated by Restaurants-America. But what sets it apart is the level of local libations, from Two Brothers and Metropolitan brews to cocktails devoted to Illinois-made spirits, such as the Chicago 75 ($10), made with North Shore #6 gin, Koval chrysanthemum honey liqueur and Goose Island 312. It's now open for lunch, hoping to add evening hours by week's end.

Haven

650 N. Dearborn St. No phone yet
Lest you think the so-called ultra-lounge concept went out with the recession, this spot aims to cater to the club-crawling crowd at a lower price tag—think $9 martinis and Grey Goose bottle service for $150. Located in the basement of the Joynt (enter off Dearborn just south of Erie), the lounge opens at 10 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and has no cover for now. The candlelit front room is fit for sitting and sipping on plush banquettes, while the DJ booth-equipped back room has a clubber feel. Find reservations info on metromix.com.

Houndstooth Saloon

3369 N. Clark St. 773-244-1166
The popular Wrigleyville hangout with a Southern accent moves one block south to much larger digs, reopening Thursday with its customary country music night. If anything has staying power at this slippery North Clark address, which has switched from Brody's on Clark to Twisted Spoke to the Zoo in recent years, it's this bar with a booming University of Alabama following. We've got our eye on the party room, decked out with a trio of booths that are each equipped with TVs and beer taps built into the table. Until a self-serve metering system similar to that of Bull & Bear's is fine-tuned, taps will be monitored by the staff.

RANDOM ACTS OF GREATNESS

5 things we're loving this week

1 The Maple Leaf cocktail ($10) at Gilt Bar (230 W. Kinzie St.). This not-too-sweet drink featuring Rittenhouse rye is perfect for entry-level whiskey drinkers. —Lisa Arnett

2 The refreshing mojito ($8) at Cafe 28 (1800 W. Irving Park Rd.). Served in a pint glass with fresh mint, this classic Cuban cocktail reminds us that summer drinks are just as nice in the dead of winter. —Rebecca Palmore

3 The quirky duck-centric mural on the ladies' room wall at Duck Walk's new Lincoln Park location (1217 W. Fullerton Ave.). These drawings of a quaint duck city (think duck gas station and Duck University) were so sweet that even our dining companion couldn't resist snapping photos of them. —L.A.

4 Video Power Hour, 8-9 p.m. Fridays at Faith & Whiskey (1365 W. Fullerton Ave.). You can't go wrong with this rotating blast from the past, pairing 60 retro video clips with a drinking game (throw back shots from a $10 domestic pitcher at the start of each clip). Last week we reveled in '80s TV show intros, from "Perfect Strangers" to "Tailspin;" this week, watch movie trailers from the '90s. —Lisa Balde

5 Amy Lechelt-Basta, the sweet and stylish owner of former Southport shop Ciao Bella who now runs her own styling service, the Style Muse. If you've missed her as much as we have, pay a visit Friday at Londo Mondo (2148 N. Halsted St.) in Lincoln Park, where she'll help shoppers put together spring outfits (5-8 p.m.). —L.A.

Bigger and better

Event co-founder Josh Chicoine on year two of the Chicago International Movies and Music Fest

By Matt Pais

"Last year we were more concerned about just putting this thing on," co-founder Josh Chicoine says about the first installment of the Chicago International Movies and Music Festival. "And getting the film festival part of it up and going."

For anyone who thinks the music side got short-changed, well, CIMM 2010 is different. Held Thursday-Sunday primarily at the St. Paul Cultural Center (2215 W. North Ave.), Lincoln Hall (2424 N. Lincoln Ave.), Chicago Cultural Center (78 E. Washington St.) and Schubas (3159 N. Southport Ave.), this year's fest includes about a dozen musical acts (including Robyn Hitchcock, DJ Spooky and Jon Langford) as well as several musical accompaniments to films. Arguably the most unusual: King Pluto's Whispering Choir performing with the Lonesome Organist, who will be playing a 100-year-old pipe organ to accompany the 1925 silent Italian horror film "Maciste in Hell."

While eating with fest co-founder Ilko Davidov at 90 Miles Cuban Cafe (2540 W. Armitage Ave.), Chicoine, 36, who lives in

CIMM co-founders
Josh Chicoine
and Ilko Davidov

Lincoln Square and was the singer-guitarist in mostly defunct local band the M's, checked in about CIMM part two.

What it takes to put on an event like this:

"Uh, leap of faith?"

Movies and music go together like ... "Chocolate and peanut butter. Are you gonna use that one? [Laughs] Let me ask Ilko, hold on one second. [Asks Davidov] How about a shot and a beer."

On more bands entering the film world: "It's almost like the next wave of MTV, where you couldn't not have a video during that time because of the number of bands, the amount of music and everybody's vying for attention. The more innovative [of a] group you are, and more places that you can be seen, the better it is for you."

How much the music/movies relationship was damaged by "From Justin to Kelly": [Laughs]

"Well, you know, Hollywood has some funny ideas and every year they try to outdo themselves by lowering the standards. There's life, and I think maybe you have to look outside of the Hollywood machine to see it. So that's our role."

Band he wants to make a movie: Sigur Ros, whose tour documentary "We Play Endlessly" is screening during Sunday brunch at Schubas. "I think that if they went for it, they would come up with something that is really beautiful."

Filmmaker he wants to make an album:

Paul Thomas Anderson. "I was completely in love with 'There Will Be Blood.' I thought as a whole entire thing, that thing was just amazing."

Chicago International Movies and Music Festival (CIMM)

When: 7-11 p.m. Thursday; 4 p.m.-midnight Friday; noon-midnight Saturday, noon-8 p.m. Sunday

Info: There are a total of 38 feature films and 15 music videos. You can snag tickets to individual events for as low as $10, buy an all-movie pass for $30, or get into every event for $40. Full info at cimmfest.org

Lessons from CIMM '09: "Ilko and I kind of held things close to the chest last year and realized that that wasn't really the way to do it. We needed to empower people more and get more responsibility spread out so that people weren't calling our cell phones for straws or more cups, along with 'Where the hell was this film?' Our phones were ridiculous last year. I would turn it off for like 15 minutes and I swear to God I'd have 13 voice-mail messages and 50-some odd text messages. It was crazy. This year we're definitely more focused on getting our organization to the point where everybody's got what they need, people have the authority to make decisions without calling us for everything, and I think that's going to be a big change."

Making the fest happen: "Everywhere that we turned we found people that were excited about what we were trying to do and willing to help out, even in the smallest way. Chicago's a place where you can do things and you can do things in a new way. I don't feel like there's anything that I can't do here. If you do good things and make good friends and do everything in a positive way that's sincere, Chicago is willing to listen. And in our case, willing to

NEW RELEASES

The Postelles

The Postelles

!!! "White Night" digital EP
(Capitol Records)

I've been waiting for an official release from this New York band since being highly impressed by its display of charming, Frankie Valli-meets-the Strokes pop at Lolla 2008. At last this little teaser, three tracks plus a remix of "Sleep on the Dance Floor," arrives in advance of the band's self-titled full-length debut, due later this year. The verdict: Well, the remix is pretty unnecessary, but the original version is candy-coated modern doo-wop that makes you want to sing along. Singer Daniel Balk's irresistibly retro voice makes "Looking Glass" catchier than its melody deserves to be, and the title track's fidgety groove earns considerable danceability—just not if you're wearing an outfit less than 45 years old. Nothing here is quite as delicious as the Postelles' previous Albert Hammond Jr.-produced single, "123 Stop," but I'm still really jazzed for the full-length.

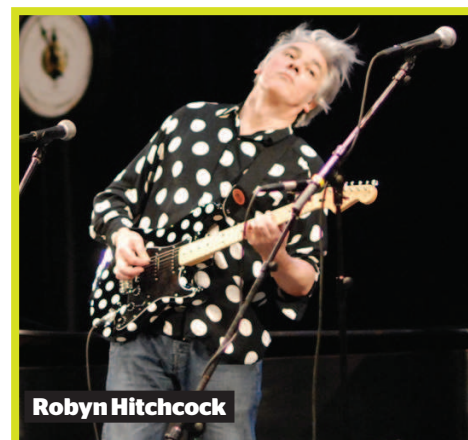

—MATT PAIS

make this idea that was hashed—you know, two guys at a bar [Green Eye, 2403 W. Homer St.]—into a reality to which we're in the second year of and growing. And Chicago wants this to happen, and we want to give it to 'em."

Goals for the future: Get bigger. "I think we realized this year that the idea is pretty fantastic and the thing that we're running into right now, which everybody's running into now, is dollars to make it happen."

If someone says, "I've never heard of that; I'm not going": "I would say there's nothing easier than to keep on doing the same thing you've been doing and to not seek out new things."

If you think the programming's too weird: "There's going to be some people who are uncomfortable by things that they don't get. They don't understand; they've never been exposed to something that's new. Which is completely understandable. People are people and you can't make 'em change or do anything to make them understand. They either get it or they don't. And I think a lot of things that I get a lot of people don't get. Like 'From Justin To Kelly.' I don't get that, but maybe some other people do."

ROCK 'N' VOTE RETURNS!

Don't delay: Submit your Rock 'n' Vote demos now

Our annual local band contest Rock 'n' Vote is back, and it's your big chance to gain more exposure for your Chicago band. Doesn't matter if you're an all-girl rap trio or a singer-songwriter with a wicked sense of humor. Send us your demo. We'll pick 10 favorites, and Metromix readers will listen to the finalists and vote for their faves. The top four acts will headline a free concert this spring.

The sooner you submit—by mail or e-mail—the sooner we can consider you for the seventh annual Rock 'n' Vote bash. Mail us your music, bio and anything else you've got. Send electronic submissions (music, color hi-res photos, YouTube video, etc.) to mpais@tribune.com. And get ready to rock!

Steppenwolf for Young Adults presents

John Knowles' A Separate Peace

adapted by Nancy Gilesnan directed by Jonathan Berry featuring ensemble member Alan Wilder with Will Allan, Chance Bone, Jake Cohen, Curtis M. Jackson, Damir

Konjicija and Govind Kumar

Set at an all-boys boarding school in New England during World War II, A Separate Peace is a fascinating look into the dark side of adolescence. The complex bonds of friendship between shy, studious Gene and his athletic daredevil roommate Finny are tested—with shocking consequences. Based on the best-selling novel, A Separate Peace is an undisputed American classic about trust and betrayal, war and peace.

HIGH SCHOOL MUSICAL

Cult classic 'The Breakfast Club' gets a local makeover for the stage

By Rebecca Palmore

The (high school) halls are alive with the sound of music, and the tune is teen angst. That's right: John Hughes' iconic 1985 movie about Saturday detention—and so much more—is getting the song-and-dance treatment thanks to an adaptation by self-described "Breakfast Club" geek Jason Geis.

The 32-year-old co-artistic director and co-founder of pH Productions wrote songs about detention, virgins, being trapped at school and more for his ensemble, which got its footing locally with improv and sketch comedy before moving into the genre of musical theater last year with the debut of "Rubbed The Musical" (the story portrayed a genie who lived inside a magic bong. Geis played the genie). This year, Geis is directing his first adaptation, with arrangements by musical director Jessica Hunt.

If you're expecting a parody of Brat Pack personalities, however, you're better off roasting the film in the privacy of your own home. Geis' version, while funny, doesn't dare make fun of the source material. We asked him to explain.

You've said you made this "out of pure respect and admiration for the original film." Was that your goal all along?

Absolutely. "Breakfast Club" is my favorite movie of all time. I remember identifying with it really early on. My mom said, "You've got to see this movie," and I remember being little—almost 8—and watching it and not understanding it, but liking it.

Did you spend a lot of time in detention in high school?

I was in detention once. My favorite character in the movie is Brian, the Anthony Michael Hall character. That's the first and only time that kid will ever been in detention, and that's how I was. We were in French class and the teacher said, "If one more person says a word, you're all getting a detention." And someone said, "A word." We all laughed and thought it was great.

Tell me about the songs.

There are a couple of songs that are really close to my heart. "Spread My Wings" is one of them, sung by the Allison Sheedy character—and it's kind of her moment.

When she's getting the makeover?

Before that, when she

The Breakfast Club Musical Studio BE, 3110 N. Sheffield Ave.

dumps her purse out. And they're like, "What is wrong with you?" So she kind of has her moment in the sun. And then, there's a thing at the end called, "Would it Be Wrong?" where they're all starting to realize they've fallen for each other. There's 20 songs total.

How would you describe the style of the songs?

They're all over the board.

They're Broadway style, but we played with a lot of different genres because all the kids are different.

Is there a song about smoking pot?

A lot of people have asked me about that scene. I cut a lot of the pot-smoking stuff out. It is still in the show, but there's not really a specific song about it. It's the only part of the movie—when Emilio Estevez does his little dance and screams and breaks the window—that's my least favorite, so I cut it.

How many times have you watched the movie?

Seriously? Over 100. I watched it at least 50 times before I started writing [the musical]. And since then, probably at least another 20 or 30 more. I have it on my iPhone right now so that I can watch certain scenes every once in a while.

So you're still going back to the movie?

I've had to walk away from it. This is an homage to the movie. I really wanted it to be our own interpretation. I had to stress to the actors that I don't want these to be impersonations of Rob Lowe and Emilio Estevez and Molly Ringwald. In fact, the girl who's playing Claire asked if she should dye her hair red, and I told her, "No. I don't want you to be playing Molly Ringwald playing Claire. I want you to play Claire."

Do you have more full-length musicals in the works?

There are at least three more right now that I know of. I'm writing one based on the life of the Parker Brothers and the creation of the game Monopoly. The cast is really anxious for me to start adapting other movies into musicals, so there's been a request for me to do "The Goonies." I'm looking at the script right now, but I've made a promise to two of our cast members that I will give it the old college try.

Ebert speaks again

Movie critic makes himself heard through computer

By Maureen Ryan
TRIBUNE

Four years ago, one of the most famous voices in the entertainment industry was silenced.

Film critic Roger Ebert's voice was heard again Tuesday on "The Oprah Winfrey Show."

A high-tech program created by a Scottish company called CereProc used Ebert's DVD commentaries to create a synthetic version of his voice, which Ebert used to "talk" via his computer on Winfrey's show.

Ebert has been battling cancer for eight years, and for the past few years, he hasn't been able to eat, drink or speak.

But he hasn't lost the ability to communicate—far from it. As proved in his reviews, a recent Esquire profile, on his blog and through his Twitter tweets, he continues to be one of the most productive critics.

He's also one of the most beloved; when he walked out on Winfrey's stage, he got a standing ovation. Ebert and his wife, Chaz, joined Winfrey in her Chicago studio, but the part of the interview in which he unveiled his new voice was shot in the couple's Chicago town house.

"It still needs improvement but at least it sounds like me," Ebert said through his computer voice "[In] first grade, they said I talked too much. And now I still can."

As Ebert "talked" for the first time since July 1, 2006—the date of the surgery that ended his ability to speak—his wife wiped away tears.

"I actually think it's incredible, it's incredible that that's your voice," she said. "Roger, what do you think?"

"Uncanny. A good feeling," he said.

Though the new voice did sound a lot like the

Ebert familiar from "At the Movies," for much of the interview, Ebert used a more standard computer voice, which sounded a bit like Hal from "2001: A Space Odyssey."

Ebert said he couldn't recall his last words.

"I probably spoke them to Chaz as they wheeled me out to the operating room," he said. "They were probably, 'I love you.' At least I hope those were my last words. On the other hand they may have been, 'Good morning, doctor.'"

He said he often dreamed of frosty root beers shared with his father.

"In my dreams I'm talking all the time," he said.

Ebert and Winfrey, who are old friends, discussed his day-to-day life since his cancer diagnosis, and the show chronicled a typical day for the Eberts, which involved three film screenings, a meeting about a possible new TV project and a lot of writing for Roger.

These days Ebert is cancer-free, and he has ruled out any future surgeries.

"This is the way I look and my life is happy and productive, so why have any more surgery?"

Battle of the frizz

Chicago Tribune

In a tizzy over frizzies? If you have something other than naturally straight hair, you're probably dealing with the affliction day-to-day, whether you live in blizzard-battered, static-scoured regions of the North or all-humidity-all-the-time patches of the South.

"It's the No. 1 hair complaint we get from readers," said Victoria Kirby, beauty editor for Allure magazine.

Here are some tips from Kirby for those who are frizz-fighting at home.

What to prep with

Styling

Brushes

Natural boar-bristle brushes help seal the hair cuticle of those who blow-dry straight, Kirby says. Many salon stylists like Marilyn brushes (themarilynbrush.com), especially compared with the price of Mason-Pearson (masonpearson.com).

Dryers

Consider investing in a hair dryer that boasts buzz words such as "ceramic," which evenly distributes heat, and "ionic," which is said to help neutralize static and frizz. If you want to preserve curls, make sure the dryer comes with a diffuser. One option: T3 tourmaline dryers (starting at $119, at ulta.com).

Irons

If you use a straightening iron, ceramic and ionic remain key words. A beveled edge gives a more natural curve to ends. Sultra irons (starting at $145 at sephora.com) have auto shut-off. Maxius irons (starting at $69.95 at HSN.com) are good for coarse hair, Kirby says.

The finish

Skip hair spray! Try either a shine spray between your hands, such as Citre Shine's Shine Mist Anti-Frizz Spray Laminator ($3.99 at drugstores), or skim a smidgen of anti-frizz cream over the surface, such as Fekkai Advanced Brilliant Glossing Cream ($20 for 4 ounces at ulta.com).

Living Proof No Frizz

A team led by an MIT scientist says a compound called PolyfluoroEster prevents humidity from penetrating hair more thoroughly than a typical anti-frizz ingredient, silicone. Plus it is said to coat cuticles to reduce friction. It's $24 for 4 ounces at sephora.com. The reviews are as rave as you're going to get from the frizz constituency.

"Even the editors here, who are very hard to sway, say it's a miracle product," Kirby says.

Drugstore alternative

John Frieda's Frizz-Ease product line gets props from Allure magazine and Paula Begoun, author of "Don't Go Shopping for Hair-Care Products Without Me." Frizz-Ease's makers say supermodel Gisele Bündchen uses Crème Serum Overnight Repair Formula. You apply it to dry hair before bed, two or three times a week. It's $8.99 for 1.69 ounces at drugstore.com.

Deeper conditioning

Kirby urges a deep conditioning treatment once a week. Rene Furterer's Myrhea line has a Silkening Mask ($23 for 3.4 ounces at sephora.com). Phyto has a Phytojoba intense hydrating mask ($38 at 6.7 ounces at ulta.com). Salon straightening treatments can be beneficial, but Kirby urges caution with those dubbed "Brazilian." Some use formaldehyde. "Ask your salon how the treatment straightens," Kirby said. "If it uses keratin, great. If they say something else, you might want to think twice."

Wine never frowns on frozen food

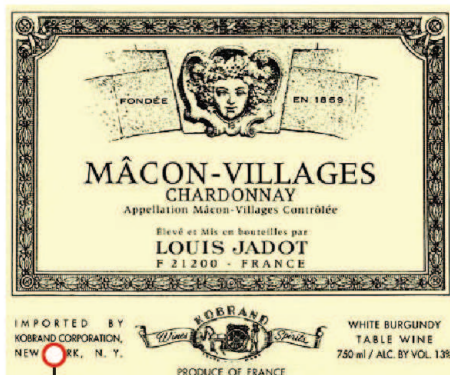

When you are rushed for time or just need something quick and easy, frozen meals can be handy and convenient. You may feel a pang of guilt for not making the effort to cook but by adding wine you can heat up your frozen dinner and turn the whole affair into something luxurious. The same food and wine pairing principles apply to your favorite frozen entrees.

Because we're dealing with pre-portioned food items, I've paired them with half-bottles so you'll have just the right amount of wine to go with your meal. A half-bottle will yield approximately 2.5 glasses of wine. REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR ALPANA SINGH IS DIRECTOR OF WINE AND SPIRITS FOR LETTUCE ENTERTAIN YOU ENTERPRISES AND THE HOST OF "CHECK, PLEASE!" Kashi Lemongrass Coconut Chicken with Kim Crawford Sauvignon blanc New Zealand $10

The fresh grassy and citrus notes of the Sauvignon blanc accentuate the lemongrass and Asian flavors in the dish.

Trader Joe's Tarte d'Alsace with Louis Jadot Macon Villages France $8

The bright, crisp yellow apple flavors of this Chardonnay provide a refreshing contrast against the salty ham and Gruyere cheese in the flatbread.

Amy's Black Bean Enchilada with Apaltagua Cabernet Sauvignon Reserva Chile $6

The fresh and juicy blackberry flavors in this Cabernet Sauvignon pair well with the cumin and subtle spice flavors in the enchilada.

Amy's Vegetable Lasagna with Felsina Chianti Classico Italy $14

The tart sour cherry and dried herb flavors of the Chianti meld well with the tomato sauce featured in this lasagna.

Lysacek

The spicy condiments

ABC has revealed the pairings on "Dancing With the Stars." Some highlights:

- » Olympian Evan Lysacek and Anna Trebunskaya, the sultry redhead pro dancer. A poll on tvguide.com shows that 39 percent of respondents believe this couple will win.
- » ESPN's lovely Erin Andrews and Maksim Chmerkovskiy, the hottest hoofer out there. Rawr!
- » Reality mom Kate Gosselin and Tony Dovolani, who is one of the married dancers. Watch your hands, newly divorced lady! BTW, Gosselin told Jimmy Kimmel that she expects to win, even though she lacks coordination.
- » Singer Nicole Scherzinger and Derek Hough, the blond with the beautiful abs. Expect very little fabric in her costumes.

Gosselin

The onion

The lettuce and tomatoes

TV Land has announced that it has greenlit 10 episodes of the sitcom "Hot in Cleveland," starring awesome TV veterans Valerie Bertinelli, Wendie Malick and Jane Leeves. Betty White also has a role. This is good for us, like tasty veggies.

The cheese

Jeffrey Osborne (left) singing "On the Wings of Love" on Monday's "After the Final Rose" show. Where did ABC dig him up?

The meat

Jay Leno's "Tonight Show" return and "The Bachelor" did well in the all-important ratings game. Fifteen million people watched Jake pop the question to Vienna on "The Bachelor" finale. Meanwhile Leno's kickoff Monday night beat up David Letterman's "Late Show": 6.6 million viewers to 3.8 million, eonline.com reports. What happened to all those people angrily insisting they would not watch Leno?

PIGGY GOES GAGA?

"The Greatest Muppet Movie Ever Made" may be just that if it's true that Miss Piggy's character is based on Lady Gaga. Screenwriter Jason Segel reportedly "envisions the modern Miss Piggy living indulgently and arty abroad," a source told the Los Angeles Times. "Miss Piggy ends up becoming like a Lady Gaga-esque character living in Europe. Kermit ends up being destitute and the main characters find him living in squalor."

Pattinson would like to be quiet

"Twilight" hottie Robert Pattinson thinks "Betty White is one of the sexiest women in America." He told "The View" women Tuesday about his appreciation for older women and also was asked about his recent odd comment in Details that he is "allergic to vaginas." "I learned two things from that interview," he said. "One thing, never try and make jokes in interviews, and the other thing is just, like, never do interviews ever."

'Idol' ailments

"American Idol" Top 20 contestant Crystal Bowersox, who used to live in Chicago and has diabetes, has been hospitalized, Fox confirmed to usmagazine.com.

As a result, the guys competed on Tuesday night's show and the women were moved to Wednesday. In other "Idol" news, Season 5 alum Elliott Yamin, who is trapped in Chile after the quake, needs insulin supplies to treat his diabetes, he tells foxnews.com.

Lil Wayne hangs around

Lil Wayne's sentencing on a gun charge has been postponed yet again, this time due to a fire in the basement of Manhattan Criminal Court, a New York Fire Department spokesman told eonline.com. This further postpones a trip to jail for Dwayne Carter III, who got another pass when he needed dental surgery.

She's getting more dates

Being referred to as "sexual napalm" isn't bugging Jessica Simpson that much. John Mayer blabbed to Playboy that she is "crazy" in bed, but Simpson says on "The Oprah Winfrey Show" on Wednesday that although she doesn't want people to know such intimate details about her, her phone rang "off the hook" when the interview came out.

That's showtime for "The George Lopez Show," which is featuring "The Jersey Shore Presents" skits spoofing Oscar-nominated movies this week. You can see Snooki as Brad Pitt's character in "Inglourious Basterds," along with the men doing a lame-ass job of defusing bombs in their "Hurt Locker" spoof. See the skits at redeychicago.com/showpatrol.
